Re: ET302 victims' families request new leadership at FAA

Dear President Biden and Secretary Buttigieg:

The undersigned families and friends of ET302 crash victims request that you replace the top management of the FAA and install new leadership at key positions. The FAA has been, and continues to be, more interested in protecting Boeing and the aviation industry than safety. A new team must replace Administrator Steve Dickson, Ali Bahrami (Associate Administrator for Aviation Safety); Earl Lawrence (Executive Director, Aircraft Certification Service) and Mike Romanowski (Policy and Innovation Division Director, Aircraft Certification Service).

These top officials should be replaced because they have lost the confidence of ET302 families and friends, Congress, the flying public, FAA engineers and international regulators. We are surprised and disappointed that they are not among the holdovers from the prior administration that have been replaced.

Serious lapses by the FAA after the JT610 crash on October 29, 2018 resulted in the deadly Boeing 737 MAX 8 remaining in service without correcting its safety problems. The Joint Authorities Technical Review committee and other investigatory bodies identified many FAA problems that have not been corrected. Internal FAA staff surveys revealed that the agency management favors industry profit interests over safety.

The Boeing 737 MAX 8 continues to be a dangerous plane with several single points of failure. FAA engineer Joe Jacobsen still grades the recertified plane a "D" or an "F". Critical systems that are legacies of older aircraft which do not meet modern safety rules remain on the MAX, including the single string rudder control.

Several senators have called the FAA a "captured agency". Representatives DeFazio and Senators Cantwell and Wicker have stated that the FAA obstructed their investigation and engaged in a prolonged adversarial relationship with their committees.

FAA employees have publicly and privately stated that the agency's management, including those we wish replaced, favor industry over safety. And that FAA personnel conducting the MAX recertification efforts blocked engineers experienced in the systems under investigation from participating. Others FAA employees have testified before the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure that FAA managers overruled near unanimous engineering requests to correct MAX systems. Former Boeing Senior Manager Ed Pierson, who helped run the MAX production line, described a chaotic and untrustworthy production process at Boeing and that he never saw FAA inspectors on the plant floor.

Administrator Dickson promised transparency to us and to Congress but that promise turned out to be a lie. ET302 families requested documents from FAA regarding the MAX return to service through various means including the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). We have not received one document in response. The FAA has been vigorously fighting against turning over information to FlyersRights.org which issued a similar request for documents.

Mr. Dickson did not listen to whistleblowers in the FAA and continued employing Messrs. Bahrami, Lawrence and Romanowski who failed to act after the JT610 crash. He also was a material actor in a terrible whistleblower retaliation case against Delta, his former employer, in which a very large damage award was issued by an administrative law judge.

Patrick Ky, the Executive Director of the European Aviation Safety Agency, stated to some ET302 family members that FAA officials' goal after the ET302 crash was to return the MAX to service in the summer of 2019. When EASA demanded more information on systems beyond MCAS, FAA personnel complained that they were "European bureaucrats".

The Senate report found that FAA leaders engaged in obstruction of the DOT Office of Inspector General's review of the 737 MAX crashes. It also determined that the FAA failed to hold employees accountable for lapses in oversight and certification of the MAX. Mr. Bahrami astoundingly testified to Chairman DeFazio that he was not aware of a risk assessment that projected 15 more crashes after JT610. An internal FAA survey conducted in late 2019 revealed that FAA employees feared retribution from management when reporting safety concerns.

As you know, it is typical for a new President and Secretary to install their own agency leadership upon taking office. The urgency is particularly great because there are clear and direct warnings that the MAX is still not safe, in large part because the leadership team favors industry which changes just enough to remain the same. The risk of a third crash is not trivial.

The FAA needs new management to place the interests of the flying public over the profit interests of Boeing and the aviation industry. You have the right and the solemn duty to install new leadership at FAA. The world is looking at us; the credibility of US aviation oversight is at stake. We strongly request that you do so.

Sincerely,

ET302 victims' families and friends
